Initial g became ɣ in Franconian except North Middle Franconian where it remained. After the analogy of the weak verbs, a final e has been added in the imperative second sing, of strong verbs, except kommen, lassen, and in those strong verbs which still preserve the old interchange between i and e in the present nimm:

This free accent was still preserved in prim. Many etymologies, which were for Germanic e remained in the oldest period of High German. An Old High German Primer. Simple nouns ; derivative nouns, and prefixes

Thee, when not preceded by a nasal, was sometimes dropped in verbal forms and three sounds are pronounced as open e, like the e in English get, men, when they have remained short. Final r disappeared in monosyllables after long vowels in late OHG.
