But in the instant the ball hits the bat, the crowd spontaneously lets out a great roar, which is heard by the fellow in the kayak, who now starts paddling faster toward the stadium, and – lo and behold – the ball drops into his lap instead of hitting the water six feet further. So the meaning of this unusual image apparently has something to do with the fullness of the Moon.

All of this provides us with the background we will need to penetrate the story. This is the denial of Equilibrium, the negation of Balance. If we annihilate the Qlippot, therefore, we would eliminate our only hope of reconstructing the World Soul and returning to Eden. Thus it is written:.

So the idea of a fixed and certain present goes out the window whether you are aware of it or not. Recall that Chochmah represents a state of pure temporal Symmetry in which past, present and future merge.
