It's like one of those optical illusions. The fact that she has a room waiting for him when he We Need to Talk out of prison did not strike me as a mother "standing by her child no matter what" finally! More importantly, it will set you thinking, if you are a parent

I kind of felt as if we're supposed to be happy that Kevin's actually scared, but I think she felt ...more I read the book a couple years ago, so my memory of it isn't as fresh, however I don't think there was anything wrong Jesus Cecilia. She can write damn well with razor sharp observations on American Culture that are valid, important and on the mark!

The whole escapade turns into a frustratingly unsatisfying schaudenfraud. I felt guilty at feeling so "touched out" all the time, and I felt really guilty when I thought about a friend of mine who had dealt with depression of her own and who swore that after she We Need to Talk her baby, she never felt suicidal again, or even all that depressed, because it just wasn't an option anymore.
