If you're already convinced that teaching your baby to read isn't going to mortally wound their infant souls then you'll be happy to have your intuition confirmed by data, and you can then proceed to skim the first pages. The rest of the book gives a system for creating cards and starting to expose the baby. A large part of the book is spent explaining whether and why anyone would want to teach their baby to read. I tried to slow it down and be a little goofy with my daughter. I CAN'T tell you that a kid that knows more than many of his teachers in grades school. My 4 year old is reading everything he sees now, and my 1 year old is trying. Teaching is giving your child new information as you would give him a gift—testing is asking for it. Just started teaching him last week and already my 2. I have used this on my child. The method described in the book using very large, bold flashcards has worked for thousands of families, and I plan to start trying it with Isobel within the next few months.
