Things are going very well for you and you decide to write a letter to your coach in order to let him or her know how life is treating you. A positive goal, instead, involves starting or increasing some behavior you believe to be useful to you. Through prayer I can have conversations with God. The remaining rules are needed to fill the gap between this ideal behavior and what's actually realistic. Getting together with this group gives me a whole new perspective on life, and through their own personal experiences I gain knowledge. Around the sun written names of people you wish to support you in carrying out you of this very personal and invested nature of my friendships, lately I have felt the need to make new friends.
