This had been what she had wanted, though she had never said it in so many words. Was this the Promised Land? I found it hard to put this book down once I started reading it. The whole farm lay there before him, broken and under cultivation, yielding. These were the very words which he had heard his father use the night before; now he repeated. At times he gave his whole attention to that part of the plain lying between him and the western sky line; with head bent forward and eyes fixed and searching, he would sniff the air, like an animal trying to find the scent. We'll go over and have a look at it pretty soon. That winter they had only potatoes and salt herring to eat, three times a day; his mother divided the potatoes carefully, for there were barely enough to go. It looked like the giants she had read about as a child; for a long while she was unable to banish the picture from her mind.
