Mill proposed that Carlyle produce the work instead; Mill even sent his friend a library of books and other materials concerning the Revolution, and by Carlyle was working furiously on the project. In Irving had gone to London, and in June Carlyle followed, in the train of his employers, the Bullers. The present volume covers the Province of Antwerp. It also served as a major influence on a number of his contemporaries, including Charles Dickens who compulsively carried the book around with him, [2] and drew on it while producing A Tale of Two Cities for his crowd scenes in particular. In and he visited Irving in Glasgow and made long stays at his father's new farm, Mainhill; and in June in Leith Walk, Edinburgh, he experienced a striking spiritual rebirth which is related in Sartor Resartus.
